

Fostering Connections

Tips for Families

You know your child.

Sharing about your child's learning and development helps others know about your child's strengths.

Share:

- Your family's strengths.
- Your goals for your child and your family.
- What you want others to know about your child's strengths and interests.
- How your child learns best.
- What you love about your child.
- What you find challenging.
- Ways educators can be supportive.

To help your child learn at home, find out:

- What your child is learning in their early education program.
- What your child enjoys at their program.
- What areas your child thrives in.
- How your child gets along with other children.
- What opportunities you can work on together.
