

What to Expect on Your First Home Visit

[Music]

Narrator: Your first home visit could be the start of something big. All you need is your child and a comfortable place in your home to talk and play together. If you'd like, you can include other family members who will be involved with your baby's care. You'll talk about your child, how you see your role as a parent, questions you have about your child's development, your child's likes and dislikes, and your observations about your child's personality, and how she interacts with others. You'll also talk about details, like what to expect during home visits and parent and child socialization groups, the best day and time for home visits, how to communicate between visits, and how to share information with family members. That's it. You've got this. And your home visitor will have your back every step of the way.

[Music]